999 Grade Silver

Silver is used in drinking water primarily for its antimicrobial properties, helping to purify and keep water safe for consumption. Silver ions can kill bacteria, viruses, and fungi, making it a natural alternative to chemical water purification methods.

Here's a more detailed look at how silver is used in drinking water

- ✓ Antimicrobial Properties :
Silver has naturally antimicrobial properties, meaning it can kill harmful microorganisms in water
- ✓ Purification :
When water is stored in a silver glass or bottle, silver ions can neutralize harmful microorganisms, making the water safer to drink.
- ✓ Water-Borne Disease Prevention :
Silver's antiseptic properties can help prevent water-borne diseases like cholera and typhoid
- ✓ Shelf Life :
Silver-treated water can remain fresh for longer periods than water stored in other materials, as silver prevents the growth of bacteria, mold, and fungi.
- ✓ Water Purifiers :
Silver is also used in water purifiers to prevent bacteria and algae buildup in filters, allowing them to effectively remove contaminants like chlorine, lead, and particulates.

Jamun Wood

Jamun wood is used in water tanks to naturally purify and maintain water freshness. The wood releases phytochemicals that kill harmful bacteria and prevent algae growth, making the water safer and healthier. It has been a traditional method of water purification before the wide-spread use of modern filters.

How Jamun Wood is Used

- ✓ Water Tank Purification :
A piece of Jamun wood is placed in the water tank to release phytochemicals that kill bacteria and fungi.
- ✓ Algae Prevention :
The wood helps prevent the growth of algae and green moss in the water, reducing the need for frequent tank cleaning.
- ✓ Traditional Water Purification :
It is a natural and chemical-free way to purify water, especially in areas where access to modern water filtration is limited.

Benefits of Using Jamun Wood

- ✓ Natural Water Purification :
It acts as a natural purifier without the use of chemicals.
- ✓ Antibacterial and Antifungal Properties :
The wood's natural properties help eliminate harmful microorganisms.
- ✓ Prevents Algae Growth :
Helps maintain water clarity and prevents unpleasant odors.
- ✓ Boosts Immunity and Supports Overall Health :
Traditional practices suggest that drinking Jamun-purified water can boost immunity and support overall health.

Some studies suggest magnetic water can enhance cell growth and metabolic processes.

Copper Drinking Water

Copper's use in drinking water, primarily in copper bottles or vessels, is based on its antimicrobial properties and the potential for beneficial copper ions to be re-released into the water. This method is often used for purifying water and providing additional health benefits.

Benefits of Using Copper Drinking Water

✓ Antimicrobial Properties :

Copper is known to kill bacteria, viruses, and other microorganisms that can contaminate drinking water. This is because copper ions penetrate the cell walls of these pathogens, effectively destroying them.

✓ Water Purification :

Copper vessels can be used to purify water by removing harmful bacteria and impurities. Storing water in a copper vessel for several hours allows the copper to release ions that help purify the water.

✓ Health Benefits :

Copper is an essential trace mineral that supports various bodily functions, including immune system function, energy production, and red blood cell formation. Copper-infused water may also help with digestion, potentially improving the absorption of nutrients.

✓ Ayurvedic Tradition :

The use of copper vessels for water has a long history in traditional Ayurvedic medicine, where it is believed to balance the three doshas (Vata, Pitta, and Kapha).

✓ Potential Downsides :

While copper water is generally considered safe, some individuals may be sensitive to high copper levels. It's important to monitor copper levels in drinking water, especially if using copper pipes or vessels.

Bio Ceramic Minerals

Bio ceramic minerals, like those found in bioceramic water amplification filters, can be added to drinking water to enhance its properties. These minerals, such as tourmaline, magnesium, calcium, and potassium, can increase alkalinity, improve water taste, and provide antioxidant benefits. Bio ceramic minerals can also help remove chlorine and other contaminants from water.

Benefits of Using Bio Ceramic Minerals

- ✓ Bioceramic Water Amplification (BCWA) :
BCWA filters utilize rare ceramic materials and minerals to enhance water's health-promoting qualities.
- ✓ Mineral Content :
BCWA filters add minerals like magnesium, potassium, and calcium to the water.
- ✓ Alkalinity :
BCWA filters significantly increase the alkalinity of the water, which can be beneficial for some individuals.
- ✓ Antioxidant Properties :
The bioceramic minerals in BCWA filters can transform the water into a powerful antioxidant.
- ✓ Other Benefits :
BCWA can also remove chlorine, improve water taste, and reduce ORP (Oxidation Reduction Potential).
- ✓ Water Clusters :
BCWA-treated water can have smaller water clusters, potentially leading to better hydration
- ✓ Natural Minerals :
Bio ceramic balls can also contain and release natural minerals like calcium, magnesium, potassium, and phosphorus.
